Slashes Husband's Throat and Swallows Poison—Became Insane After Holy Roller Meeting

By Associated Press
OWENSBORO, June 19.—Strange religious fervor resulting in insanity is believed to have caused Mrs. Cleve Dangleberry of Clevean, Breckenridge county, to kill her two daughters, age three and five, after she slashed her husband's throat Monday. The woman then swallowed half an ounce of poison. She has since been semiconscious and unable to give any explanation. Her death is expected. Her husband is not seriously injured. Mrs. Dangleberry said she attended a Holy Roller meeting in the grove near her home and became imbued with the teachings of that sect. The extreme heat also apparently added to her mental derangement.

WOMAN BANDIT
MURDERER IS
MAN IN DISGUISE

Mrs. Tesmer Identifies Person of Dual Character by Smile as One Who Killed Her Husband—Arrest Shows Strange Story

DOUBLE IDENTITY MAY
CLEAR UP OTHER CRIMES

By Associated Press
CHICAGO, June 19.—Fred G. Thompson said to have posed as a woman, was identified today by Mrs. Richard C. Tesmer as the supposed woman bandit who shot and killed her husband in a hold-up the night of June 5.

The arrest unfolded a strange story. Unable to find the girl with the smile who Mrs. Tesmer previously said had killed her husband, police recollected she said the supposed woman had fat hands. This led to search for a man disguised as a woman. Eventually their knowledge of the underworld led them to the flat of Frank Garrick where Garrick, a person whom he declared had lived with him fourteen years as wife, and two others were arrested. In the opinion of police, Mrs. Garrick leads a double life as both man and woman, masquerading as one or other at different times. The suspect was identified by his smiling expression which Mrs. Tesmer said the bandit assumed until almost the instant of firing the shot that killed Tesmer. Mrs. Tesmer is not sure about the color of the bandit's eyes but positively declared, however, that Mrs. Garrick or Thompson was the killer. Thompson when arrested wore woman's clothing. Police obtained her name from an automobile identification card. They say the disclosure of the prisoner's double identity may help clear up a number of robberies and other crimes.

NEW L. M. U. HEAD
ARRIVES TODAY

Will Make Home in Harrogate Now—Sure National Park Here Can Be Obtained

Dr. R. O. Matthews, new president of Lincoln Memorial University, was through Middlesboro today with his wife and twelve-year-old son, on their way to Harrogate to make their home there. Dr. Matthews came here directly from Washington where he completed his work last week, and is ready to take up his new duties.

The idea of the Lincoln National Park at Cumberland Gap is meeting with great support on ever side in Washington. Dr. Matthews says, especially since Dr. Hubert Work's return from here and his favorable report on the location. Dr. Work is also a consistent booster for L. M. U. now, the new president says. Dr. Matthews declared this morning that he thought there would be no trouble what ever in getting the park here if the people would keep the project fresh and keep working on it. He spoke in particular of the way in which Hon. J. M. Robison congressman from this district is working in its interest.

In speaking of the anti-prohibition sentiment, which seems to be growing in this nation, Dr. Work said that he considered that the action of the New York legislature had crystallized prohibition sentiment and had done more to unite forces and insure prohibition enforcement than anything else could. Dr. Work had been special assistant to the prohibition commissioner for the past year and is in a position to speak authoritatively on the matter.

The new president is enthusiastic about the field for service at L. M. U. He considers, with many of our most thoughtful and understanding leaders of today, that the big thing in our nation is not so much education for education's sake, but education for service, and citizenship, and honest endeavor to make the world a better place in which to live.

SPARLIN BOWMAN
ON TRIAL TODAY
MURDER CHARGE

All Morning Given Over to Choosing Juries—Twelve Women Called But All Rejected By Defense

OPENING TESTIMONY BEGINS
GUN AT 2 O'CLOCK

Trial of Sparlin Bowman, charged with killing Fred Howard, on the Page road a few weeks ago, began at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The entire morning session was spent in selecting juries for this and the Lane trial. Opening testimony of the commonwealth indicated that Bowman shot and killed Howard at the insistence of Charlie Lane, deputy sheriff.

Lane, Bowman and Howard had a quarrel following which Howard went to a house a short distance away and returned with a shotgun, according to the testimony. The gun was carried under his left arm. He was told not to shoot into the car as there were children inside.

He replied that he had no intention of shooting, and, according to witnesses, never made any attempt to shoot. "Shoot him, shoot him," witnesses say Lane told Bowman who was said to have drawn his pistol and fired the fatal shot.

The commonwealth is represented by Judge J. G. Rollins, Jim Golden, Judge Davis and T. G. Anderson. The defendant is represented by John Howard and I. G. Leabow.

Selection of a jury required several hours. One hundred and twenty-six men and women were summoned and nearly all of them were called in to qualify. Many of them failed to qualify because they confessed to conscientious scruples against capital punishment. Many of the men who qualified were challenged and dismissed.

The following women were called in and either failed to qualify because they did not believe in capital punishment or were challenged and dismissed by the defense.

Mrs. C. K. Brosheer, Mrs. O. O. Stone, Mrs. F. D. Hart, Jr., Mrs. D. G. Hinks, Mrs. C. P. Davidson, Mrs. Wilbur Hollingsworth, Mrs. Ray Moss, Mrs. D. Z. Gibson, Mrs. Guy Forester, Mrs. J. E. Evans, Mrs. J. T. Alderson, Mrs. H. A. McCamy.

A Day in June

And what is so rare as a day in June? Then, if ever, come perfect days; Then Heaven ties earth if be in tune, And over it softly her warm ear lays; Whether we look, or whether we listen, We hear life murmur, or see it glisten, Every clod feels a tit of might, An instinct within it that reaches and tows, And, groping blindly about it for light, Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers; The flash of life may well be seen Thrilling back over hills and valleys; The cowslip startles in meadows green, The buttercup catches the sun in its chalice; And there's never a leaf nor a blade too mean To be some happy creature's palace; The little bird sits at his door in the sun, A tilt like a blossom amid the leaves, And lets his lilted being o'er-run With the deluge of summer it receives; His mate feels the eggs beneath her wings, And the heart in her dumb breast flutters and sings; He sings to the wide world and she to her nest In the nice ear of Nature which song is the best?

Simplicity Is Keynote for Girls' Frocks
The note of variety in clothes for young girls lies chiefly in clever trimming arrangements and the addition of smart, dainty accessories. The dresses themselves are on the simplest lines, for however Fashion may demand the ornamental for adults, simplicity will always remain the correct thing and the smartest for Miss Ten to Seventeen.
So, then the trimming must be contrived not to interfere with this simplicity, but rather to accentuate it. This may seem perplexing so let us take an example:
Suppose you buy two remnants of flannel, a plain and a checked. And tub flannel, let me remind you is one of the most serviceable of fabrics to include in any girl's wardrobe, as it is for the younger children. Use the checked material for a straight vest front and short skirt and the plain for the rest which is cut like a peket and stitched to the panel vest and skirt.

A pretty finish for the edges is a worsted braid with scalloped border. Make roll-back cuffs and a turn-over collar of creamy white flannel and use this same edge as a finish. Here, you see, is a dress that, though perfectly simple, is not plain. Two-material frocks are not only attractive and in vogue but they are oftentimes an economy as a means of using up short lengths.
An excellent way of varying a school dress is to have detachable emplacements of contrasting colors and fabrics to be worn over one of the straight frocks. For a plain worsted dress you might make a straight panel or apron about 12 inches wide to be attached at the shoulders, or better to a back section like it, when it can simply be slipped over the shoulders and under the belt.
With cuffs finished all around so that they too, can be slipped on to the sleeves presto, another dress! This suggestion can be repeated indefinitely, resulting in what is apparently a new frock each time.

American Red Cross Restores Roses to Cheeks of Children Who Were Once Doomed to Die

They are not prize-winning children, perhaps, judged by American standards, but their mothers are proud of them and proud of the fact that they are being photographed by an American Red Cross worker in Serbia. Serbia is in Macedonia and the children are only a few of the refugees who are housed in the flimsy barracks there and fed by the American Red Cross.

It is doubtful if there would be any youngsters visible were it not that America had come to the rescue and sent to Greece great quantities of American milk. It's the milk that makes the little boys' legs look so chubby and gives the little girls their plump cheeks.

And it isn't in Serbia alone, but all through Greece and the islands that dot the Aegean, that babies' lives have been saved and mothers have been made to smile again, not by twos and threes but by thousands and by tens of thousands. During the winter and early spring the American Red Cross was feeding in Greece no less than 500,000 refugees from Anatolia and Eastern Thrace, mostly women and children. Not all of them would have actually starved without this feeding but in a way like this it is better to err on the side of safety. The elder members of the family get such solid food as bread and beans, rice and corn, but for the babies there was milk—that was the most highly appreciated gift of all.

The refugees, a million of them all told, came to Greece following the burning of Smyrna and the defeat of the Greek armies last fall. Some of them were able to take care of themselves from the start. Some have since managed to reestablish themselves. It is summer in Greece now. There are vegetables in the gardens and grain is ripening in the fields. The crisis of the emergency has passed. The American Red Cross will end its Greek program on June 30 and in withdrawing will carry back to America the gratitude of the entire Greek nation.

EXPLAIN DELAY ON STREET BUILDING

Humbar Company Waiting On New Equipment Ordered For Work
Here.

New equipment has been ordered by the Humbar Construction company for the work of improving Middlesboro streets and for this reason there has been delay in beginning the work. The machinery has been ordered from the factory, according to Herbert Kidd, engineer in charge, and is being shipped now.

Mr. Kidd was in Middlesboro yesterday in the interest of the work. The date when the actual work will begin is not known as this depends entirely upon the arrival of the equipment. John L. Humbar, member of the construction firm was expected here today.

Autos Plunge Into Crowded Street

A freakish accident occurred in uptown New York street, just off Broadway, when two automobiles fell out of the second story window of a garage. Passing crowds regarding from the street narrowly escaped death when a mechanic tried to move one machine into another so hard that both were propelled through the window. Picture shows the first machine overturned and the second lying on its side.

Forecasts Say We Will Go Over a Million in This Section During Season

SEVERE TIMBER SHORTAGE SEEN

Report Says United States Is Largest User of Lumber in World.

A period of severe timber shortage in the United States is inevitable, according to the Forest Service, in an article in the 1922 Yearbook of the United States Department of Agriculture.

culture, entitled "Timber: Mine or Crop?" The evil effects of having treated the forests of this country as mines from which to extract timber without regard for proper methods of growing new timber crops are discussed.

"American standards of living and much of our industry have been developed upon timber supplies so abundant and cheap that the United States to day is the largest consumer of wood in the world," states the Forest Service article. "We now use-nearly half the lumber, more than half the paper, and about two-fifths of the wood in all forms. We produce from two-thirds to three-fourths of the naval stores. The timber to be cut from the forest much as coal has been supply our demand has been mined from the ground."

Timber More Than Half Gone

The original forest lands of the country, according to the bulletin, totaled 822,000,000 acres and the stand of timber on that original area is conservatively estimated at 5,200 billion board feet, probably having been far more. Today the forest land is but 470,000,000 acres and the timber stand is reckoned at 1,600 billion feet of virgin timber and 600 billion feet additional of culled and second-growth stands.

The rate of timber consumption in the United States, including loss by fire and other destructive agencies, is nearly four times as great as the rate of timber growth, it is also stated, the country's requirements amounting to about 23 billion cubic feet each year while but approximately 6 billion cubic feet is being grown. Although timber is growing on perhaps 250,000,000 acres of our forest land, the crop is so poor and so subject to damage that the land is producing but a small part of what it could produce under forest management.

However, according to the data contained in the article, if the entire forest area of the country—470,000,000 acres—were placed under intensive forestry about 27 billion cubic feet could ultimately be produced each year. This amount would exceed the present drain on our forests by a relatively small margin.

Increased Production Would Be Slow

"This production, however, can not be brought about in a short time," continues the article. "To make the practice intensive forestry universal or even the rule throughout the United States will be possible only through gradual progress. It will require the development of scientific knowledge and technical methods of timber growing comparable with what has slowly and at large cost been obtained for agricultural crops.

"It will require effective protection against fires. It will require methods of cutting the mature timber that assure prompt and complete reforestation. It will require the selection and concentration of growth on the best species in each region. It will require cultural operations, such as thinnings, which in European countries yield, and in this country may be expected to yield, a revenue from forest land before the main crop reaches maturity. It will require a cut so regulated that only the mature timber will be taken, and no more than the total growth of the whole forest.

"Even if intensive forest management could be applied instantly to the entire area of forest land in the United States, it would take a generation or two to bring about forest conditions as favorable to high production as those now to be found on small areas in this country or over large areas under forest management in Europe.

"Further, since the timber crop requires several decades to grow to maturity, though a full stand of the right kinds of trees could be started on all our forest land by some magic overnight, it would be 30 years at least before new growth would, under average conditions, attain sufficient size to furnish even low-grade material.

"In short, with the utmost that can be done many years must pass before we can make our forests produce through growth as much timber as is now yearly taken from them, and a period of shortage is inescapable."

CAMPAIGN WILL BE STARTED THIS WEEK TO RAISE $140,000 FOR KENTUCKY STADIUM

This week friends and alumni of the University of Kentucky start a two-week drive to raise $200,000 for a Stadium, Basketball Auditorium, Student Loan Fund and Putnam Memorial.

The proposed stadium will seat 20,000 people and will be one of the best in the United States.

It is estimated that it can be erected in eight months at a cost of about $140,000.

For some time the need for a stadium has been apparent to all Kentuckians who have watched other states step out of the ranks by erecting huge stadiums that focus the eyes of the nation upon them.

Kentucky proposes to erect a stadium that would be a source of pride to any University. In it will be staged tournaments of all kinds among the high schools of the state. And during football season Kentuckians will have the pleasure of seeing the larger Universities of the South, East and Middle West who will be invited to play here.

reported, and Captain C. C. Cathoun, Chairman of the Campaign Committee, enthusiastically predicts a successful campaign as they do other

1. The proposed $140,000 Stadium for the University of Kentucky, to be built on the athletic field of the University of Kentucky.
2. The Old Roman Coliseum from which many of the ideas used in the modern Stadium can be traced.
3. Ohio's great Stadium erected at Ohio State University.
4. (Oval) Goal-Line foot ball scrimmage showing inadequate wooden bleachers on the present athletic field of the University of Kentucky.

The World's Dancing Sensation In

"The Woman Untamed"

Doraldian, known far and wide for her daring interpretations of unfamiliar Hawaiian Dances, is the Star in "The Woman Untamed" which comes as the Feature Attraction at The Manring Theatre, for ONE NIGHT ONLY, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20th.

This wonderful creature, who was so idolized and popular on the stage with her Hula-Hula Dances, brings to the screen the superb gift for acting and a marvelous dancing ability. Not only that but she introduces into the picture many strange dances of the South Sea Islands never hitherto seen. One is a religious dance called "Dance of the White God," a weird, original movement used by the superstitious natives as a part of their ritual.

How she does a wild Hula-Hula Dance to save the man she loves is a moment in a story grippingly tense and absorbingly fascinating, where brute-force and woman's will will clash for supremacy.

Mlle. Rapska performs three of these dances IN PERSON, fading from the picture into the dance, and back again to the picture, etc. Nothing like this has ever been seen before in Middlesboro. Special music score, written for the picture and the dances, used throughout.
